

Script 13

The Character Map

In literature, a character map is a graphic organizer that can illustrate and identify the personality elements, qualities, flaws, relationships and other attributes of a character.

Character maps are useful for keeping track of different characters in texts and to better understand their relationships and development.

Here are some examples of character maps.

By using keywords to complete them, character maps can help you synthesize your notes and your understanding of the texts.

Have a look at the example from the unit The Power of One. Look at the different elements that are important for the task. You can watch the clip and see which information made it onto the character map.
